Stefanie Houwaart is an interdisciplinary natural and public health scientist who, due to her own personal experience, has been involved in the BRCA-Netzwerk e.V. – Hilfe bei familiären Krebserkrankungen since 2012. As a patient representative for health research and policy, she brings the patient perspective to scientific projects and health policy committees. As a scientist, together with colleagues she founded the start-up partieval – Vermittlung partizipativer Kompetenzen, Prozessbegleitung und Evaluation im Bereich Gesundheit GmbH in 2024. In this context, she is dedicated to participatory research. For Stefanie Houwaart, cancer prevention is both a highly personal and a health policy priority: at the individual level, it is important to find the right path for oneself within the framework of scientific evidence; at the societal level, it is important to implement prevention based on fairness, solidarity and sustainability.
